TP-Link AC1900 Wifi Card Audio Interference

2020/02/18

Edit: I turned my power to 75% in driver settings, which completely eliminated the sound, but it reduces performance. I recently noticed that there was a lot of noise coming from my Logitech Z506. I was ultimately dissapointed because I unplugged them from my computer and the noise continued. I then realized something. The noise stopped when I turned off my wifi, and got really bad when I was downloading at 120mb/s on Steam. I know it's my wifi, but I don't know why it's causing my speakers to output so much annoying noise, regardless of the source input. The WiFi is interfering with at least one component inside my speakers. It's a 2.4 GHz network, the 5GHz won't connect because it's not as strong, although it is capable, but it's not available because the SSID is the same and Windows prefers the 2.4 band. Regardless, the high bandwidth transfer is causing my speakers to spazz out, and I'd love some input. If I didn't make it clear, toggling my wifi adapter off resolves the issue instantly.
