WiFi / Router Options for a House With Many People / Renting
2020/08/22

Hey Guys,I have a bit of a unique situation. I'm a college student, and I live in a house with about fifteen guys in it. The house is three floors (one is the basement), and has several rooms. Right now, we have internet from xFinity and our plan includes about 300 Mbps down. Unfortunately, random corners of the house, especially when all of us are at home at night really go dead. Our devices connect, but the internet is extremely slow.I have the task of fixing this issue for the house. Right now, our modem is in the basement in a corner (not the greatest placement I know). But I've just upgraded our plan to 1 Gigabit down and we're about to get that set up in the next couple days. So hopefully that'll give us a little bit more bandwidth to mess around with. The modem will go on the first floor, in the middle of the house, along with the router. We can run any cables through walls or mess with existing wiring, because we don't own the house, we only rent it out. So my question is, with the new service, the modem being moved to the first floor, what is my best option for a router / extenders to make sure that all corners of the house are covered. I know my situation is already a little bit handicapped considering I can't run wires and stuff, but what's my next best option? And does it make a difference if I get a different modem or no?Thank you so much!
